The census shows a remarkable state of affairs in Nevada. In 1880 it had a population of 52,266 and in 1890 the figures were 45,761, a loss of 26 per cent. in a decade. The star of empire in its westward course seems to have skipped Nevada.

The thermometer, Monday, in New York, registered 98°. In the tenement house districts the population were all in the streets or on the housetops throughout the night. Many cases of prostration from heat were reported to the police. Three persons died on the streets before assistance could reach them. These three were only a small fraction of those who died from the effects of the heat. It is estimated that at least 50 persons, sick and weak, had death hastened by the hot wave. at least of the hot wave.

That legislatures can do something to ameliorate the condition of labor is well shown in Col. Carroll D. Wright's lecture on factory legislation in the United States. Through legislation shorter hours have been established; operators given protection from dangerous machinery and explosions; better ventilation of factories provided; industrial and evening schools established; besides many other reforms which have greatly increased the comfort of the operative.

A dastardly attempt to burn a big tenement house was made in Hoboken, N. J. Thursday morning. Ten families were compelled to flee for their lives. There were some miraculous escapes. At 4 30, a milkman passing by 212 Park avenue, a five story tenement house, saw smoke coming from the basement. He gave the alarm and a squad of police were soon on the scene. The commotion awakened the tenants and the greatest excitement prevailed. Women appeared at the windows on the upper floors, and their screams were awful to hear. The firemen did heroic work. Ladder tensus were raised to the windows and women and children hurried down. While a fireman was carrying a woman down a ladder it snapped and they fell about tenfect. Both were badly hurt. After everybody was taken safely out of the building the firemen had the fire very soon under control. Capt. Hayes began an investigation. Train No. 21, on the Pennsylvania road, is an elegantly equipped vestibule train, and reaches Dayton, O., via Nenia. It consisted of eight cars, and was loaded down with passengers east bound. Eight miles from the city begins a grade, the steepest in this part of the State. Four miles are very steep, the remaining four being moderately so. The track is almost a bee line and the crosses many. At the top of the grade the train, being so heavily loaded, acquired great momentum, and Engineer Davis undertook to lessen the speed, but found himself powerless, the air brakes refusing to work. Sanding the track and reversing the lever—dangerous things to do—were tried ineflectually. The friction became so great, and the danger of tearing up the track and precipitating a derailment became so imminent that is seemed best to let the train alone. At this time the momentum had been increasing, and now the train was proceeding at a sensational pace—fully 70 miles an hour. Farm houses looked like mere specks, and telegraph poles and fences were matters of memory rather than sight. A dozen vehicles containing people were harrowly missed at crossings as the train went thundering along, leaving behind a moke-like trail. Back in the coaches a panic reigned. Women screamed and some fainted. Men became frantic, and the trainmen, assisted by a few coolerning some of the more excited from impling from the trails to certain death. Each moment the excitement grew. The train and some fainted, the process of the chicago, Hamilton, & Dayton and Big Four rosds, ran past a station at 60 miles an hour, and was not atopped until t reached the heart of the city. Thousands gathered to see the train and marvel at its miraculous escape from destruction. A FORTUNE

Inherited by few, is pure blood, free from hereditary taint. Catarrh, con sumption, rheumatism, Scrofula, and many other maladies born in the blood, can be effectually eradi cated only by the use of powerful alteratives. The standard specific for this purpose—the one best known and approved—is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the compound, concentrated extract of Honduras sar saparilla, and other powerful altera-

The Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm, located at Guelph, Canada, is strictly an agricultural institution. It was established by the Provincial government for the purpose of furnishing instruction in agriculture to such as might wish to avail themselves of the apportunities afforded. Thus far it has been eminently successful as is shown by the increasing number of students as its work becomes known.

It has a farm of six hundred acres and fully It has a farm of six hundred acres and the needed buildings to go with it. The office of this farm is instruction in the principles and processes of farming, and in fulfilling this work it is in part conducted in the same experimental manner and also as a model farm, or more presently speaking of the same of the same and at a cost that would put to shame the ment limited provisions of the kind provided at York our State College for carrying on similar work. Evidently the Provincial government appreciates its agriculture and in connection with it realizes the importance of a liberal education to go with it.

Both the educational and the illustrative work of this institution is especially strong in its stock relations, and much of the time of the students and much of the work of the farm is devoted to this end. It was with the view of learning more definitely valies with the view of learning more definitely valled than could be drawn by the reading of its reports the extent of this work and how it was being conducted, that we made a visit to the institution, and for the purpose difference of showing others what our Canadian neighbors are doing in agricultural illustrated education, we give a brief description of what we found to the readers of the Parmer.

The farming and the experimental work is in charge of the Professor of Agriculture, the farming and the experimental department by Professor C. A. Zavitz. As a matter of much importance the farm is being run in all its department to the farm is being run in all its department to the commercial article having been used in any of the work.

The growing of grain is the sheet anchor of Ontario farming. Accordingly much plot work is being carried on in a comparison of the different varieties and different kinds of grain. Varieties have been collected from every country of the civilized world and are being compared side by side in plot work. As showing the extent of the work being done in this direction, we will state that there were 534 plots of grain, made up of fall and spring wheat, barley, oats, and peas, and all of exact uniform size and laid out with geometric.
